The play opens with the two women, Annie and Rosa, meeting on a ship bound for America. They are both fleeing their home countries for different reasons. Annie is escaping from poverty and violence in Ireland, while

Rosa is fleeing from an arranged marriage in Italy. The two women quickly bond, and they support each other through the difficult journey to America.

When they arrive in America, the women face a new set of challenges. They are both poor and have no family or friends in the country. They must find work and a place to live, and they must learn to navigate a new culture and language. The women are determined to make a success of their new lives, and they work hard to achieve their goals.

The play follows the women as they build new lives for themselves in America. They find work, they make friends, and they eventually start families. However, their lives are not always easy. They face discrimination and prejudice, and they must constantly struggle to make ends meet. Despite the challenges they face, the women are resilient and determined to make a better life for themselves and their families.
